Investors Business DailyDow Jones futures: As the stock market rally pauses near highs, Apple stands out, while Microsoft shapes up. Taiwan Semi and Qualcomm are big cap stocks to look at. Take a deep breath, get ready, the New Year is just around the corner, and while we're all ready to celebrate – just basically, because getting out of 2020 is reason enough for joy – let's also imagine where we are and where we're going. There is a growing sense of optimism, evoked by the availability of COVID vaccines and the potential they provide for a return to normalcy on the main streets around the country. Finally, a chance that the shutdown and the social rejection regimes will really stop, and in the short term. There is a real chance that, by the end of a 2021, John Q. Public may get back on its feet. Combine it with Wall Street's current trading at or near their all-time highs, and we're looking at the prospect of a banner year. A return to grassroots normality will be great – but we also have the prospect of an overall rising market. Writing by JPMorgan, chief U.S. equity strategist Dubravko Lakos-Bujas writes: Shares are facing one of the best backdrops this year. Risks associated with the tensions in global trade, political uncertainty and the pandemic will disappear. At the same time, liquidity conditions remain very supportive and there is an extremely favourable interest rate environment. It's a Goldilocks environment for risky assets. Mr Lakos-Bujas does not shy away from quantifying his optimism. He predicts as much as 19% gains for the S&P 500, says the index will hit 4,000 by early 2021 and reach as high as 4,400 in the latter part of the year. Turning Lakos-Bujas' prospects for concrete recommendations, JPM's cadre of stock analysts are pounding the table on three stocks that look particularly compelling. We ran the trio through TipRank's database to see what other Wall Street analysts have to say about. Sotera Health (SHC)Sotera Health occupies a unique niche in the healthcare industry and through its subsidiaries offers a number of safety-oriented support companies for healthcare providers. These services include sterilization procedures, lab testing, and advisory services – and their importance is immediately clear. Sotera boasts over 5,800 healthcare providers customers in more than 50 countries around the world. While not a new company – two of its branches have been in business since the 1930s and 40s – Sotera is new to the stock markets, having held its IPO just last November. The initial offer was considered successful, raising $1.2 billion on a sale of 53.6 million shares. Earlier this month, Sotera announced that it used much of the IPO capital to pay down $1.1 billion in existing debt. This included $341 million in an initial mortgage, plus $770 million in aggregate principal on a case of senior secured notes. The move allowed Sotera to increase its revolving credit facility to $347.5 million. That plant is currently undrawn. Among bulls is JPM analyst Tycho Peterson who rates SHC an overweight (i.e. Buy) along with a one-year price target of $35. This figure suggests a 31% up from current levels. (To look at Peterson's track record, click here) SHC is uniquely positioned to benefit from healthy end-market growth and favorable price dynamics, Peterson noted. Given a diversified operational platform, sticky multi-year contracts, an effective pricing strategy, significant entry barriers and high regulatory oversight, we are projecting ~9% sales growth, with higher utilization driving continued expansion [and] robust FCF supporting ongoing de-leverage, making us positive on both the near and long-term outlook. The Wall Street analyst corps is behind Peterson on this one – in fact, the 7 latest reviews review unanimous Buys, making the analyst consensus a Strong Buy. SHC is currently trading for $26.75, and its $32.50 average price target means an upside of 21.5% by the end of 2021. (See SHC stock analysis at TipRanks) Myovant Sciences (MYOV)Let's stick to health care, and look at Myovant Sciences. This clinical research biopharma company focuses on major issues of reproductive system disease in both men and women. Specifically, Myovant is working to develop treatments for uterine fibroids, endometriosis, and prostate cancer. The myovant pipeline currently has Relugolix as a treatment for fibroids and endometriosis. The drug is in phase 3 trial for the latter, and has had its NDA submitted for the former. Also underway, and related to reproductive health, is MVT-602, a new drug aimed at improving egg maturation and supporting in vitro fertilization. In addition, Myovant has announced this month that Relugolix has been approved FDA - under the brand name Orgovyx - as a treatment for advanced prostate cancer. The drug is the first, and currently only, Oral Gonadotropin-Releasing Hormone (GnRH) Receptor Antagonist for the disease. Orgovyx is expected to enter the market in January 2021.Analyst Eric Joseph, in his note on this stock for JPM, describes how he is impressed with Relugolix based on the clinical and commercial potential of lead access relugolix for the treatment of endometriosis and uterine fibroids, as well as in men for the treatment of advanced prostate cancer. The analyst added, in women's health, we believe that the overall of Phase 3 data to date de-risks the likelihood of relugolix approval in the United States for uterine fibroids and endometriosis – commercial opportunities that are underreflected at current levels. Furthermore, we see an attractive commercial approach for relugolix in the treatment of advanced prostate cancer as an oral LHRH alternative with a differentiated CV risk profile. These comments support Joseph's Overweight (i.e. Buy) rating on MYOV, and his $30 price target means a 31% up for the next 12 months. (To look at Peterson's track record, click here) Overall, Strong Buy analyst consensus ratings on Myovant come from 5 reviews, and the distribution is clear for bulls: 4 to 1 in favor of Buy versus Hold. The stock's $22.80 share price and $36.40 average price target provide a robust upside potential of ~59%. (See MYOV stock analysis at TipRanks) Metropolitan Bank Holding (MCB)Third stock, we're going to switch lanes from health care to financing, where Metropolitan Bank Holding operates – through its subsidiary, Metropolitan Commercial Bank – as a full-service bank for businesses, contractors, and personal customers in the mid-market segment. The Bank's services include corporate lending, cash management, deposits, electronic banking, personal control and prepaid cards. In a year that has been difficult for most of us, MCB has managed to add steadily increasing revenue and solid results. Top line has from $33 million in Q1 to $36 million in Q3. EPS was stronger, at $1.27 per share, up 30% year-on-year. The gains come as the bank provides forward guidance of $153.9 million in total revenue for next year, which - if met - will reflect a 22% profit over 2020.While MCB's financial results have shown steady gains, the stock's appreciation has not followed suit. The stock has only partially regained losses that were taken last winter at the height of the corona crisis, and is currently down 26% this year. Looking at the New York banking scene from JPM, analyst Steven Alexopoulos notes general difficulties in the commercial real estate lending sector – an important part of mcb's portfolio – due to the ongoing pandemic issues. In this environment, he sees the Metropolitan Bank as the right choice. We're not as bearish as most on the outlook for New York real estate. After witnessing many cycles in NYC, the time to buy has been when the stalls are running in the other direction. In previous cycles, MCB has been an outperformer on credit metrics in terms of its loan portfolio relative to our coverage group, Alexopoulos noted. Alexopoulos goes on to explain another key strength in MCB's loan portfolio: In a low interest rate environment, MCB stands better positioned than peers to withstand NIM headwinds with 59% of MCB's loans being fixed interest rates and 67% of the remaining variable rate loans have floored to protect from lower short-term interest rates... To that end, Alexopoulos rates MCB an overweight (i.e. Buy) along with a $50 price target. If the target is met, investors could pocket profits of 43% over the next year. (To look at Alexopoulos' track record, click here) Some stocks fly under the radar, and MCB is one of those. Alexopoulos is the only recent analyst review of this company, and it's decidedly positive. Modern shots alone could be worth as much as $1 billion to McKesson's 2021 earnings and $1 a share to its earnings, said analyst Ricky Goldwasser. (Bloomberg) - Alibaba Group Holdings' U.S.-listed shares fell the most ever on concerns over China's investigation into alleged monopolistic practices at the e-commerce company. Affiliate Ant Group Co., the second pillar of billionaire Jack Ma's internet empire, was also called to a high-level meeting over financial regulations. The pressure on Ma is central to China's broader efforts to rein in an increasingly influential internet sphere: Draft anti-monopoly rules released in November gave the government wide latitude to restrict business owners who until recently had unusual freedom to expand their kingdoms. The Alibaba investigation is a warning that the winds have shifted, Bloomberg Intelligence said in a research note. The risk, analyst Vey-Sern Ling wrote, is that the business may face long-term headwinds as a result of such moves. The stock fell 13 percent in its biggest one-day fall on record. The decline brought Alibaba to its lowest level since July, and the stock is now down 30% from an October peak. Approximately 141 million shares changed hands, the most for a single session since their debut in 2014. Alibaba said in a statement that it will cooperate with regulators in its investigation, and that its operations remain normal. Once hailed as drivers of economic prosperity and symbols of the country's technological capabilities, Alibaba and rivals like Tencent Holdings Ltd. are facing increasing pressure from regulators after amassing hundreds of millions of users and gaining influence over almost every aspect of daily life in China. It is clearly an escalation of coordinated efforts to rein in Jack Ma's empire, which symbolized China's new too-big-to-fail entities, said Dong Ximiao, a researcher at zhongguancun Internet Finance Institute. Chinese authorities want to see a smaller, less dominant and more compatible firm. Read more: Jack Ma Goes Quiet After Ant Group's Spectacular UndoingThe State Administration for Market Regulation is investigating Alibaba, the top antitrust watchdog said in a statement without further details. Regulators including the central bank and banking watchdog will separately bring in affiliate Ant to a meeting aimed at driving home increasingly stringent financial regulations, which now pose a threat to the growth of the world's largest online financial services company. Ant said in a statement on its official WeChat account it will study and meet all requirements. Ma, the flamboyant co-founder of Alibaba and Ant, has almost disappeared from public view since Ant's first public offering derailed last month. In early December, the man most closely identified with the increase in China Inc. was advised by to stay in the country, a person familiar with the matter has said. Mom is not on the verge of a personal doom, those who know the situation have said. His very public rebuke is instead a warning Beijing has lost patience with the outside power of its technology moguls, increasingly perceived as a threat to the political and financial stability President Xi Jinping rates the most. Alibaba slid 8% in Hong Kong to a five-month trough Thursday. Asia's largest company after Tencent has led losses among China's internet sector leaders since Ant's IPO got yanked, taking the total fee to about $200 billion. Tencent and internet services giant Meituan ended more than 2.6% lower, while SoftBank Group Corp., Alibaba's largest shareholder, dropped 1.7% in Tokyo.While China prepares to roll out the new anti-monopoly rules, the country's leaders have said little about how hard they plan to crack down or why they decided to act now. China's internet ecosystem - long protected from competition by the likes of Google and Facebook - is dominated by two companies, Alibaba and Tencent, through a labyrinthine network of investments that includes the vast majority of the country's startups in arenas from AI to digital finance. Their patronage has also trained a new generation of titans including food and travel giant Meituan and Didi Chuxing – China's Uber. Those who flourish off their track, the largest being TikTok owner ByteDance Ltd, are rare. The house that Jack Ma Built is China's own creation: Tim Culpán Anti-monopoly rules now threaten to disrupt this status quo with a range of potential outcomes, from a benign scenario of fines to the dissolution of industry leaders. Some analysts predict that there is a crackdown coming, but a targeted one. They point to the language of the rules suggesting a major focus on online trading, from forced exclusive arrangements with merchants called Pick One of Two to algorithm-based prices that favor new users. The rules specifically warn against selling at under-cost to sown out rivals. But Beijing's various agencies seem to be coordinating their efforts - a bad sign for the Internet sector. There's nothing that the Chinese Communist Party doesn't control and something that seems to be gyrating out of its orbit will somehow get pulled back very quickly, said Alex Capri, a Singapore-based researcher at the Hinrich Foundation.Read more: Down $290 billion, China Tech Investors Mull NightmareCampaign against Alibaba and its peers got into high gear in November, after Ma famously attacked Chinese regulators in a public address for lagging time. Market monitors subsequently suspended Ant's IPO - the world's largest at $35 billion - while the anti-monopoly watchdog threw markets into a tailspin soon after with its bill. The People's Daily warned Thursday that fighting alleged monopolies was now a top priority. Anti-monopoly has become a the issue of all questions, it is said in a comment that coincided with the probe's announcement. Wild growth in the markets must be curbed by law, it added. The Communist Party spokesman said in a commentary Friday that Chinese internet companies should consider the investigation into Alibaba as an opportunity to improve their awareness of fair competition and anti-monopoly practices. The chances that Ant will be able to revive its massive IPO next year look increasingly slim as China resteps the rules of the fintech industry, which in recent years has exploded as an alternative to traditional state-based lending. China is said to have separately set up a joint task force to oversee Ant, led by the Financial Stability and Development Committee, a financial system regulator, along with various departments of the central bank and other regulators. The group is in regular contact with Ant to collect data and other materials, study its restructuring and develop other rules for the fintech industry. China has streamlined a lot of the bureaucracy, so it's easier for the various regulators to work together now, said Mark Tanner, CEO of Shanghai-based consulting firm China Skinny. Of all the legal obstacles, this is the biggest by a long shot. Dissect China's Crackdown on Its Internet Giants: QuickTake(Updates with People's Daily comment in the 18th paragraph.)
